Ones and zeros get us together.

The world is always evolving, and the new generations are being led by technology which have allowed us to get products that maybe are not available in our country.

I think consuming local food is a great idea to support people of our same country and our economy as well. Wouldn't you support your family if they start a local business? Local food builds community and trust in people. But it also can be a little more expensive and there is a limited variation. We can know our food is ethically produced by visit the farms where it comes from.

As recommendation I'd say: let's buy now and support people who with great sacrifice get products of quality for us.

Thanks for your time.
